Seminar

This fall, Gowling WLG is hosting a number of breakfast seminars as part of our Insight Series. The informative seminars will include discussions on recent legal developments, emerging trends and issues that will have an impact on your business.

Artificial intelligence (AI) is being commercialized for many purposes: computer vision, robotics and control methods, telecommunications, financial services, and human-computer interaction, to name a few. The time and money companies are spending on commercializing AI has caused them to also leverage intellectual property laws to protect their investment.

Join Gowling WLG professional Roch Ripley, head of Vancouver's intellectual property department, for an in-depth explanation of how IP laws are used to protect AI-based inventions.

This seminar is eligible for up to 1 hour toward the LSBC's CPD requirement.

Other seminars in the series:

- Sept. 12 | New cannabis products: Regulatory and IP considerations for edibles, topicals and extracts
- Oct. 3 | Patent and regulatory affairs in the pharmaceutical market
- Oct. 16 | Data protection: What Canadian companies need to know about operating in or trading with the European Union
- Nov. 14 | Trends in international patent development
