Chris Morris

Chris Morris helps clients achieve their objectives, delivering results focused legal advice to public sector bodies, developers, investors and major corporate clients.

He draws on his 15 years of legal experience acting regularly for parties on both sides of the negotiating fence to make him perfectly placed to quickly focus on what will be most important to his clients and pragmatically to deliver the right end results.

Chris deals with real estate development, leasehold and management matters within the private and public sectors, including the development of retail/residential mixed use schemes, town/city centre regeneration projects and acquisition and disposal of investment and occupier properties.

In the data centre market he acts for investors and operators in the acquisition of new data centres and for data centre operators and customers in the grant and renewal of customer contracts.

In working with Chris, you will be engaging a lawyer who will serve your interests with dedication, applying his experience of operating in the real estate and data centre sectors.
